Interview with Engr. Okodugha Dauda Aluya, MNSE

Engr. Okodugha Dauda Aluyah, MNSE, is the Chairman of the Nigerian Society of Engineers Auchu Branch and a member of National Executive Committee of the Nigerian Society of Engineers.

Okodugha Aluyah

E-Newsletter: Sir, what can you say about the young engineers involvement in the nations economy?

Okodugha: No economy can grow without the involvement of engineers in that country. There is a thin line between a developed economy and an under-developed economy. The major difference between them is the participation of engineers in the running of the economy in any of the nations. In the developed nations the engineers are actively involved in growing the economy but in under-developed nations the engineers are not involved in growing the economy, they are not brought into the picture of the development of the nation. When you talk about engineers not been brought into the picture viz-a-viz, you are talking about the young engineers. The young engineers' welfare needs to be taken care. If you want your economy to grow you must involve the engineers.

E-Newsletter: What approach do you think can be used to have the young engineers involved in the development of an economy?

Okodugha: Their welfare must be taken seriously because if we go back to how the Nigerian Society of Engineers was formed in 1958. The engineers need to have a pressure group that will focus on the welfare of the engineers and if the welfare is taken care of the young engineers will participate in growing the economy of the nation.

E-Newsletter: Thank you sir.
