

Interview with Mr. Segun Olugbile

Mr. Segun Olugbile is a member of the Nigerian Internet Governance Forum and also a member of the Multistakeholder Advisory Group of Internet Governance Forum at the global level.

Segun Olugbile

E-Newsletter: Sir, what is Internet Governance Forum?

Segun: Internet Governance Forum is an open forum where stakeholders come together to discuss issues on internet governance and these issues cut across about six specific areas which has to do with Access, Inclusiveness, Diversity, Cyber security and Trust and also the critical internet resources and other related policy issues. So internet governance forum is a platform that provides the opportunity for all the stakeholders to make contributions and interventions in policy making which at the end of the day the government will use as input. Stakeholders like the business community, the academia and the civil society make use of these inputs and they are also part of the internet governance ecosystem.

E-Newsletter: Is it a forum for individuals or is a forum for bodies?

Segun: It is more than just internet bodies because when we say internet bodies you have the impression that you have organizations that will have probably board members and will have specific interests. It is not that rather the internet governance forum is an initiative of the United Nations. It is a forum where various stakeholders in various sectors come together and discuss internet issues that concerns them.

E-Newsletter: Thank you sir.
